Doug Jones of the Wenatchee Police Department said Wednesday in a news release. "Avina became unresponsive and died following an extended struggle with correctional officers attempting to restrain him," Jones said in the news release. "Excited delirium is characterized by agitation, aggression, acute ...distress and sudden death," Jones said. "It remains an unfortunate phenomena commonly associated with law enforcement efforts to take into custody or restrain highly aggressive individuals. A toxicology report found no drugs in his system, Jones said. The autopsy report also concludes that a contributing factor to Morales's death was hypertensive heart disease. Nine corrections officers attempted to restrain Avina in the Chelan County Regional Justice Center for 15 minutes before they got him into a restraint chair wherebecame unresponsive" June 29, police say."

The deputy chased the suspect down Hall Road where the suspect ditched the car and started running, said Max Houser. with the sheriff's department. In an interview at the crime scene Houser told Central Coast News that when the deputy caught up with the suspect, he tried to grab the officers gun. However, an hour later another person with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department said that they were unable to confirm whether or not the suspect ever tried to grab the officers gun."

A minute later, as Brown ran through a field, two DeLand police officers who heard the call over the radio followed in their patrol cars. Somehow, one of the police cars ended up knocking down a fence at the end of the field, and Brown ended up dead, under the car. Raw footage: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0k6KzkW9cOw

The BSO version is that Wengert fired after a fleeing Thompson shot first at him. Thompson, whose back was turned from Wengert, was hit by a bullet traveling from back to front that fractured his thigh bone and caused him to fall forward. Residents reported hearing Thompson scream, "Help, help, he's shooting at me! I'm shot!" Although Thompson posed no risk of harm to defendant Wengert or anyone else, defendant Wengert continued firing at Thompson's fallen body, hitting him eight more times," the complaint says. In all, Wengert "discharged 25 rounds, which required that he reload his gun."
